SUEZ joins the Tomorrow's Company inquiry team

SUEZ has become a member of the inquiry team of Tomorrow's Company, a U.K.-based, agenda-setting think-tank that is bringing together several large international companies such as BP, Ford, and McKinsey, to carry out an inquiry on the global company of the future. Gérard Lamarche, Senior Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer, represents SUEZ on the inquiry team.

As a member of Tomorrow's Company, SUEZ is participating in the inquiry into the "Challenges and Choices of Tomorrow's Global Company." This study, which began in July 2006 and whose results will be issued in Spring 2007, will examine several questions, including the role of the company in society, globally and locally; collaboration of the company with financial institutions, governments, and civil society in exploring such notions as sustainable development; establishing constructive relations with all stakeholders; and managing global companies' multi-cultural human resources.

In the words of Gérard Lamarche, SUEZ Senior Executive Vice President and CFO: "The themes of Tomorrow's Company go to the core of the Group's concerns. Since its creation, as a leader in the energy and environment sectors, SUEZ has always placed sustainable development at the heart of its business strategy. The Group has been able to combine growth with ethics, and responsibility with performance. SUEZ will offer Tomorrow's Company its experience in providing concrete solutions to the local and global challenges of the future, as well as its significant contribution in the realms of sustainable development, climate change and, more broadly, the role of the corporate citizen in 21st century society."
